

All About Access

This month we are covering Access!! We routinely receive requests to provide training and support for Health Centers who are working to improve Access. These services are provided either as an onsite training or part of a remote webinar series. Since we know this is a common pain point- we thought it would be the perfect topic for all as we enter into the second quarter!

We will be covering a glimpse into these trainings on our free webinar this month on April 30th at 3:00pm ET. CLICK HERE to register.

What is access and Why is it important?

Access is defined as an attempt (successful or unsuccessful) by a patient to have an interaction with their provider or care team. In a value based environment access is measured by 5 dimensions- Appropriateness, Availability, Accessibility, Accommodation, and Affordability.

Health centers will need to have information and awareness across each of these dimensions, both within their four walls and within the healthcare community, to deliver on the promise of the Quadruple Aim. Health centers are assessed on the following:

- Adoption of value based access measures
- Utilization of access data to drive other population health strategies
- Access beyond productivity and no shows
- Access to and utilization of access data for community partners
- Access as a measure of cost
