

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Training

Let us help you with your organization's cultural competency trainings.

Here, at CURIS, upholding the principles of diversity, equity, and inclusion is central to delivering on the cultural tenets of our organizational mission. We are continuously working to ensure that we maintain a focus on staying up to date with the current needs of healthcare organizations and the communities they serve. During the month of June, the nation recognized Pride Month by celebrating the LGBTQIA+ community and bringing awareness to issues impacting this diverse and marginalized community. With elevated levels of awareness and education we can not only be better informed, but be better positioned to do our part to decrease health disparities and advance health equity for each and every individual in need. At CURIS, we offer resources internally to ensure that our company not only celebrates Pride Month but exemplifies a diverse, equitable, and inclusive environment all year long.

We have been humbled and honored with requests to provide trainings to bring this set of education and resources to our client organizations and their staff. This serves to ensure the development and support for healthcare organizations and their ability to demonstrate Cultural Competence. Our training is a 5 Part Education Series that focuses on diversity, equity, and inclusion in healthcare organizations. The objectives of this training are:

1. The importance of having a clearly defined process related to collection and documentation of SDOH, SOGI, and other PHI.
2. Considerations for training and competencies related to demonstrating and eliciting trust and mutual respect with patients regarding PHI (ie: motivational interviewing, etc)
3. The significance of maintaining privacy and confidentiality throughout the process.

Trainings that focus on the key areas above are vitally important to all organizations. If you would like more details on this training, please contact us at: info@curis-consulting.com.

We hope that all have had a great June and are looking forward to what the new month of July brings!
